Any Day in the Navy

May 18, 1994, was like any other day in the Navy. Sailors and Marines stood watches, steamed ships, trained and turned to as part of the worldwide, forward-deployed naval forces team. Although some Sailors and Marines went to work that day only minutes from home, others were at sea and ashore thousands of miles and months away from their families.

In this special issue of All Hands that celebrates the Navy's 218th Birthday, you'll see some of the nearly 12,000 photos that were shot on May 18th and sent in by hundreds of our readers. There wasn't really anything special about May 18. It was just another day we were forward deployed or supporting Sailors and Marines in the deployment cycle.

We didn't necessarily pick the most artistic or dynamic photos; we selected our photos to reflect the diverse activities our Sailors and Marines are involved in every day as they proudly serve the United States of America. ‡

Field hospital

Camp Pleso in Zagreb, Croatia, is a U.N. encampment located on the former Yugoslavian Pleso Air Base, which adjoins Zagreb's commercial airport. The area is still partially occupied by the Croatian military.

The American compound is a tent city built on a portion of Croatian Airlines tarmac and is manned by personnel assigned to Joint Task Force Provide Promise (Forward), including Fleet Hospital Zagreb, a Naval Mobile Construction Battalion 40 detachment from Port Hueneme, Calif., and a small Marine detachment from 2nd Force Service Support Group, Camp Lejeune, N.C.

Nearby, a French battalion clears a heavily mined area that will take years. When the Yugoslavian National Army pulled out, large numbers of mines were laid in an attempt to make the air base unusable.

Camp Pleso is a deceptively peaceful place where only the occasional Croatian MiG or U.N. aircraft breaks the silence. But evidence of the instability of the region rolls into the hospital on a regular basis. Bodies of soldiers ripped apart by mines and mortar fire arrive on MedEvac flights from all over the former Yugoslavia. ▮

Therien is assigned to Fleet imaging Command Atlantic, Norfolk.

Special thanks go to LT Brad Guttilla of Naval Media Center; Russ Egnor, Director, Still Photo Division, CHINFO; and the Atlantic and Pacific Fleet Imaging Commands for helping coordinate this event. And to all our contributors, listed here or printed in the book, good job. It was a hard choice.
